Dear friend,

In a time of a global pandemic, World Hope International continued to partner with those in communities worldwide to promote dignity and build opportunity and hope. While so much in the world seems to have turned upside-down since March 2020, World Hope International staff have proven to be resilient, innovative, bold, and steadfast in our mission, even during these uncertain times. The opportunities have never been greater: amid the devastating impacts of the pandemic, communities around the world are rallying and ready to build a better future for themselves. We are here to work alongside of them.

World Hope International has continued to focus on market-based and community-led clean water and energy, global health, protection, and social venture programs. When the pandemic first broke loose, we pivoted to activate a quick and intentional response to COVID-19 tailored to the specific needs of each community we serve.

Recently, I was reading in the scriptures where God tells the prophet Ezekiel that the sin of Sodom was that they were “arrogant, overfed and unconcerned; they did not help the poor and needy” (Ezekiel 16:49). Throughout the Scriptures, we are called to care for those who have been marginalized, excluded, and not listened to, and to love our neighbor as ourselves.

The causes of poverty are complex and deeply interconnected, but we partner with local communities to implement the most sustainable and environmentally friendly solutions—initiatives that belong to the communities and are centered on their visions for a better future. And we do it all through strong relationships with faith-based and secular organizations, churches, and governments and individuals who share our compassion—including you. We invite partners like you to join us as, with your support, we come alongside these communities around the world.

As you journey through this report, I hope these highlights and stories of good news will inspire you to learn more about World Hope International and consider new ways to partner with us. We know from decades of experience that the best way to make headway against the seemingly intractable problems of global poverty is what we offer — relationship-based community transformation. Together, we are promoting dignity and building opportunity and hope.

With gratitude,
John Lyon

Getting water is a challenge for the Rock Hill Community in Paynesville, Monrovia. The area is covered with granite and other rocks not far beneath the surface, making it difficult to dig wells. Except for one hand pump drilled by World Hope International (WHI) in 2008, there is no other source of safe water. Community residents either buy water sold by water trucking companies or travel to far-off areas to get it. The nearest pump (also drilled by WHI) is at least a 20-minute walk away. Unfortunately, residents say the WHI-constructed hand pump had been down for many years. The problem was compounded by the outbreak of the COVID-19 when the country was locked down to prevent spread of the virus. Without safe water in their community, residents worried about double attacks from COVID-19 and water borne diseases since they could no longer travel to get safe water. To make matter worse, income was hard hit by the virus outbreak, leaving them without resources to purchase the safe trucked water.

“The rehabilitation of our hand pump by WHI brought a big relief to our community. We no longer have to walk long distances to get drinking water, neither do we have to buy from the water companies again. The little money we have will be used to buy food for our children and us during this Corona trouble,” a resident shared.

A female resident of the Rock Hill Community pointed out: “I just want to tell you people thank you for fixing our pump. This pump’s been down for a whole good ten years, but today I’m blessed that my pump is okay, so I tell you people thank you.”

According to World Health Organization, almost 2 billion people depend on health care facilities that lack basic water services. World Hope International drilled 9 wells at health care facilities in Sierra Leone to provide water to reduce the risk of COVID-19 infection for health care workers and patients.

Frequent handwashing is one of the key steps to prevent the spread of COVID-19. For people who do not have easy access to safe, affordable drinking water, this is no simple task. Thus, WHI rehabilitated wells in Liberia despite the restriction of movement and curfew affecting the timeframe to complete each well.
The Enable the Children team first met Adamsay in 2015 when she was being used to bring in money for her family through begging. She had TB of the spine which caused her to bend over so that she had to walk with her hands on the floor. At that time, the team referred her for TB medication, and she was given exercises and a wheelchair and was sponsored to go to school.

At the end of her TB treatment, she was referred to an NGO called Africa Surgery Inc. that helped her to go to Ghana for spinal surgery. The ETC team did not see her for a long time as she then moved upcountry with her Granny. However, a few months ago she came back to be part of the ETC program again. She started again with her exercises and is sponsored to go to school. Her mother set up a small business with the grant provided by World Hope International to provide for her family. The team is so happy for Adamsay as her life would have been very different if she was left begging on the streets.

COVID-19
Health care delivery has been affected during subsequent waves of the COVID-19 pandemic. The ETC team could not conduct home visits to do exercises with the children and encourage families to care for their children as the progress of children’s mobility suffered.

Long-time Homecoming Johnson was 17 at the time of his rescue. He is the second child in a family with three children. Their father left them and their mother a few years ago and is living with another woman. Johnson enjoyed being a teenager and had an active social life. He played basketball, joined dance competitions, and played video games. While playing video games online, he met Joel, his perpetrator.

Adjusting to the shelter was difficult for Johnson. During the first two weeks, he rarely interacted with the staff. Social workers worked with his former schoolteachers to allow Johnson to continue his studies inside the shelter through a modular course. Soon he began to feel a sense of normalcy again and he was able to engage in therapy.

Relatives of the perpetrator reportedly visited Johnson’s community frequently looking for Johnson, making it an unsafe place for him to be. The community social workers worked with local officials to make safety plans to be followed if the relatives of the perpetrator bothered Johnson’s family. Meanwhile, the case management team, together with the client and his mother, identified other possible placements with relatives including an aunt who lived in a far-off province. Once a risk assessment was completed, reintegration with her was approved. Today, Johnson is thriving in his new home.

According to UNICEF, more than 1 billion children are at risk of falling behind due to school closures aimed at containing the spread of COVID-19. In countries where we work, remote education was not possible as many do not have internet access or personal computers, amplifying the effects of existing learning inequalities. At one of the schools that WHI supports in Cambodia, the enrollment of girls dropped by 6.5% with families pulling the children out of school due to fear.

While lockdowns and stay-at-home orders may be crucial in limiting and preventing the spread of COVID-19, they also have a devastating impact on women and girls living with the risk of gender-based violence (GBV). In Sierra Leone, the Recovery Center kept their doors open for survivors to receive comprehensive services. In the Philippines, WHI is creating awareness and providing care to online sexually exploited children.
According to UN World Tourism Organization (UNWTO), international tourist numbers fell by 72% with restriction on travel, low consumer confidence, and a global struggle to contain the COVID-19 virus. The demand for mushrooms decreased as factories and food street vendors closed due to the increased of COVID-19 cases reported in Kampong Cham. Many mushroom producers were affected financially by the loss of jobs of their family members and recent floods affecting their crops.

Jahoo welcomed visitors to Keo Seima Wildlife Sanctuary after three months of tourism shutdown. On a trip to view gibbons and other rare primates and hike to exclusive remote waterfalls, the Jahoo team came across loggers on indigenous land. They communicated with community leaders who responded within the hour to put a stop to the logging with the aid of KSWS rangers. The joint ranger and community team confiscated the wood, chainsaws and a vehicle used for carrying the timber.

These ancient trees are owned by indigenous families who have sustainably harvested resin from them over centuries. This traditional livelihood doesn’t harm the tree and provides sustainable income to families motivating the protection of the forest surrounding them.

These areas will be better protected through ecotourism, research and community action to replant gibbon-friendly trees and employ indigenous stewards as forest gardeners.
